S. C. Evans' Stands on

The stand taken by S. C. Evans of Riverside, Republican nominee for Congress, on the tariff question follows:

"We believe in a protective tariff which shall equalize conditions of competition between the U.S. and foreign countries, both for the farmer and the manufacturer and which shall maintain for labor an adequate standard of living."-National Progressive platform

The Progressive platform sets forth in general my views of the tariff Everything depends upon the man of the son in this district. The prosperity of very many of the men and women in this congressional district depends upon the success of the citrus fruit and sugar beet crops. At present we have a tariff of one and one-half cents per pound on lemons and it has taken us 25 years to get it. This tariff enables us to pay the laborers wages which run from $2.00 up to $3.50 per day.

Some of my opponents are arguing that the thing to do to preserve a protective tariff on the citrus industry is to send a Democrat to Congress, because he will be able to get more from a Democratic Congress than will a man from any other party. In the first place, I will not admit that this is going to be a Democratic Congress. In view of the Progressive campaign, which is sweeping this country, I am confident that the Progressives will predominate in the next Congress, but, even though the next who says he stands for protection on the citrus fruit industry, to go into

Los Angeles Examiner: The prosperity of Los Angeles and what is declared to be merely a fore-runner to the enormous trade that may be ex-pected with the opening of the Panama canal, is shown in the report of the 5000 Acres to be Reclaimed customs house for the month of sep-

The Kansas Tin Shop ]

(213 East Fourth St.) has been filling a corner of its own choice for a time past, but, having been crowded off its corner the spirit moves us to make "virtue of the necessity" and again hoist the flag of the "Kansas Tin Shop" under which flag this craft has sailed for the past twenty-seven years.

The said Tin Shop has grown considerably since it was christened, but it is the same old boat and managed in the same way by the same crew and the same motto is at the masthead: "Live and Let Live, a fair division of the combination of capital and labor.

We have more money invested in this business than any other house in Orange county and we have to pay more taxes and we have concluded that the fun of living is worth all it costs.

When in the course of human events we should conclude to "get rich quick" we will emulate the man with the hoe and retire to our respective ranches and let some other fellows run the shop. Till then we will keep full our stock of hardware and all other goods that ought to be found in a hardware house—and give every one a "Square Deal."

Jane Addams, "Settlement Worker."

This is, the brief title conferred upon Miss Jane Addams in "Who's Who." As a matter of fact, Miss Addams is a good deal more. Her story is a long record of personal sacrifice for the benefit of humanity in general, and the HULL-HOUSE neighborhood of Chicago in particular.

Miss Addams wears many degrees and titles from universities and from organizations of a national character, but she is still an active worker in her own neighborhood in Chicago. It was in 1889, with Ellen Gates Starr, that she opened her settlement of Hull-House and she has since been head resident and worker it was here that her attention was first called to the dent and worker. It was here that her attention was first called to the needs of her neighbors, and it was here that she first became interested in the Progressive Cause.

In 1909 she served as President of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections. She is both a writer and lecturer on social and political reform. Among her published works are "Democracy and Social Ethics," "Newer Ideals of Peace," "The Spirit of Youth," "City Streets" and "Twenty Years at Hull-House."

When I try to write down the steps by which I became a Progressive, I am inclined to trace them first to the gradual discovery that philanthropic effort everywhere is merging into civic effort. In fact, the line becames the entire family sewed upon the philanthropy and politics is so constantly changing that it is very difficult to know when the given step has been taken, which carried one from the first field into the second. To illustrate from my own experience: When I first went to live at Hull-House in 1889, one of the most conspicuous things upon the streets were the women and children who constantly passed with huge masses of clothing on their backs or in their arms, which they were carrying from the sweatshops. This clothing disap-

It is difficult for me to remember just when I became convinced that it was useless to provide classes and so-cial diversions for working girls who were too tired to profit by them, because of the overstrain due to long hours and night work; but it was certainly many years ago, in 1893, that I was one of an ardent group who appeared before the Illinois Legislature to urge the enactment of an eight-hour law for women. During the winter of its enforcement, the Hull-House classes were full of working girls, glad to use their new leisure for selfimprovement; and their disappointment remains in my mind as one of the sharp, definite results which followed the decision of the Illinois Su-

child might begin to work, it was these underpaid women and their un-dernourished children whom we hop-ed to help. We had found that there wrong of such an arrangement was made clear through personal acquaint-ance with those families who faced actual want in order to hide their disgrace, for they would not apply to established charities lest the family secret be discovered.

I know hundreds of other families in which the bread-winner had been crippled and killed through industrial accidents, before I realized that in older and wiser nations such families are cared for through a well devised system of social insurance.

I have always been particularly appealed to by forlorn old age, and Hull-House has long had a pension list of old people who had reached the end of their working strength and yet could not bring themselves to go to the poor-house. Nothing is more pitiful than this premature old age which comes so swiftly to the man who has gone to work too young and has worked too hard throughout his life. More than one case whom we have sent to the hospital has been diagnosed as premature senility although the man was still in the forties and once or twice in the thirties. But no private philanthropy, not even with the fine help of the Associated Charities of Chicago, can begin to care for these old people in their homes as they should be cared for; only some system of old age pensions, such as the Germans have, can make an impression on the situation.

For all of these reasons, and many more, I was gradually driven from philanthropic efforts to political action. I was glad to appear before one secured largely through the efforts of the working girls themselves and finally sustained by the Supreme Court of the state and for much else. Of course, we all rejoiced in the splendid legislation of Wisconsin, but, after all, taking the country as a whole, it was pretty discouraging and one constant.

I found myself a member of one national body and another, which was organized to secure concerted action such as the National Child Labor tial effort.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—An act providing that the State of California shall establish schools, or pay teachers to instruct in any place through out the State, where one family with children of school age live-whether in desert, farm or city-will be pre sented before the next session of the State Legislature by County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel. Orange News: The city trustees last evening took the final steps in the matter of calling a special election to decide whether or not the power of control over certain corporations should be assigned by the city to the State Public Utilities Commission. The ordinance is prepared in ten sections, each section naming a different corporation or public utility, instead of all being grouped in the same section. In that way it is possible for a voter to vote separately on each question, or to vote for only that part of the ordinance in which he is interested, ignoring the other sections if he chooses. For instance, the immediate cause of calling the election is the present situation with the gas company and that part of the ordinance will doubtless be of more direct interest to the voters than other sections of the ordinance. The vote on any section of the ordinance will not have the least relation to any other section. Some sections may be carried and others lost in the elec-

A considerable quantity of dried fruit was received yesterday. Some early-cured pears came in, and sev-eral shipments of Calimyrna figs from the Fresno district. The demand for dried fruits is rather light, because of the hot weather, and to this it is que that they have not been coming in very freely. Unbleached Sultana raisins were offered as low as 4½ cents a pound.

The staple market was quiet, and business rather sluggish. Prices still remain firm on all products. Butter is reported weak at 34 cents in San Francisco. There is little likelihood of this resulting in the lowering of the price here, however. Receipts of eggs were 50 cases; the low average is still maintained. No cheese was reported in, and 23,928 pounds of butter arrived. Some northern fresh inished or unfurnished, lot 50x136, near ter arrived. Some northern fresh-cheese was offered at 1614 cents, and domestic Swiss in small quantities at 20½. Some cream brick was offered at 18½. The price on most cheese is quite firm, however.

Fresh fruits are not very plentiful, and grapes have been bringing a high-er price this week than they were the major part of last. All pears and plums are cold storage, and are on the market in fairly large quantities. The peach season for incoming shipments from outside points is about over. Apples continue to be the prominent feature of the market; 8918 boxes arrived. Many good-varieties of cooking apples are coming in. There is a considerable quantity of roselles on display, and pomegranates are still strongly in evidence. Sweet potato prices still maintain firmness, and no shipments were re-ported in., Receipts of onions were 300 sacks, and only a very small shipment of potatoes came in-96
